Why AmeriCove...

Vet Clinics, Breeders, & Training Facilities

When your flooring project is located at a clinic like a veterinarian or training facility, it's important to keep the environment in mind. Remember that these facilities have high foot traffic as well as specialty rooms. Not only that, it's important to remember these types of locations have liquids being dropped or "dispensed" requiring the need for sanitation same as a clinic for humans.

There is a variety of colors and gloss options as well as decorative elements to think about when choosing your floor coating. Aggregate & flake blends can be great to offer to accommodate slip-resistance flooring. Here's a couple tips to think about when planning this next big project at the clinic!

Keep in mind...

- ◆ Waterproofing- consider the property's physical structure and moisture vapor mitigation, bathing, & sanitation
- ◆ Chemical, stain & animal urine resistance.
- ◆ Antimicrobial properties - discourage the spread of pathogens & bacteria
- ◆ Impact, abrasion & slip resistance - but sensitive enough for canine pads
- ◆ Static Control - consideration to imaging like CT, MRI, X-rays, etc.

May the cove be with you..
